Executive summary

In 2014, public opinion worldwide was staggered by revelations of a massive money laundering scheme in Eastern Europe published by the investigative journalists from OCCRP and dubbed the “Russian Laundromat”<sup>1</sup>. During 2010-2014, billions of US dollars from Russian banks were laundered through Moldovan banks, using illicit court rulings on defaulted fake debts. The laundered funds were further transferred to a group of shell companies having accounts in Western banks. Although law enforcement officers from Moldova pretend to have tracked down $20 billion of suspicious money, publicly available evidence shows that the real amount of laundered funds amounted to as much as $70 billion. Not a single person from the Moldovan banking supervisory or prosecution authorities has been sentenced so far for allowing this to take place on their watch. Moreover, several individuals directly involved were recently promoted to the Constitutional Court. This research summarizes the arguments on how Moldovan supervisory and prosecution authorities, captured by and subordinated to certain political elites, knowingly turned a blind eye on suspicious activities, while the Parliament and the Constitutional Court approved legislative changes to facilitate the money laundering scheme.

1. How the money was moved from Russia to Moldova and onward

The laundered Russian money may have come from unsecured bank loans, fictitious acquisitions related to government contracts, misappropriation of funds from the Russian treasury, tax evasion and smuggling. In order to move the funds out of Russia, the perpetrators opened at least 21 shell companies incorporated in the UK, Cyprus and New Zealand. The scheme worked as follows<sup>2</sup>: Shell Company A issued a promissory note to Shell Company B, without transferring any real money<sup>3</sup>. The note was endorsed by the Russian companies who intend to launder the funds, creating thus a fake debt. The same note was also endorsed by a Moldovan citizen whose identity had been stolen by the perpetrators. Using this ingenious scheme with endorsed promissory notes, the organizers claimed the fake debt repayments in Moldovan courts. Since the debt was not contested by any of the parties, the court rulings were pronounced within 5 days of the debt claims being filed. Based on these illicit court rulings, the Russian companies moved the money to Moldovan banks, into the account of a judicial executor appointed by the Moldovan court. Subsequently, the largest share of the laundered funds was further transferred to the Latvian Trasta Komercbanka, inside the EU. Further transactions using the funds originated from a commercial bank of an EU-member state and thus were not questioned by other Western banks. The money went to a total of 5,140 companies in 96 countries, according to OCCRP journalists<sup>4</sup>.

This ingenious scheme allowed the perpetrators to accomplish several goals: (i) to launder ill-gotten assets; (ii) to transfer the funds into Western banks and place them into legal circulation; and (iii) to avoid any legal issues with the repatriation of money in the Russian Federation by having court rulings issued by Moldovan judges.

Among the beneficiaries of the enormous sums run through the Russian Laundromat is Alexey Krapivin, the son of a deceased associate of Vladimir Yakunin – the former president of Russian Railways. Between 2011 and 2014, Krapivin's firms received at least $277 million from the Laundromat, OCCRP reporters say<sup>5</sup>. In 2012 and 2013 alone, companies controlled by the Krapivin family and its partners won tenders worth 120 billion rubles (nearly $3.7 billion) from state-owned Russian Railways<sup>6</sup>. Another beneficiary of the Laundromat money was Moldovan "shadow banker" Ilan Shor. Between 2011 and 2013, his companies received about $22 million from so-called "ghost companies" involved in the Russian Laundromat<sup>7</sup>. Shor was convicted for his role in the $1 billion Moldovan bank fraud<sup>8</sup> in 2017, but is free pending appeal. The corporate investigation firm Kroll stated in its report to the National Bank of Moldova (NBM) that "Shor was one of, if not the only beneficiary" of the billion dollar theft<sup>9</sup>. However, given the immense amount of the fraud (13% of the GDP), Shor could not have committed the fraud without the protection of the supervisory and prosecution authorities, subordinated to the political elites.

The immense Laundromat fraud scheme involved at least one Moldovan bank (Moldindconbank, controlled by Veaceslav Platon) and at least 19 Russian banks. One of them was the Russian Land Bank (RZB) that allegedly laundered $9.7 billion<sup>10</sup>. RZB was controlled by “shadow banker” Alexander Grigoriev, who was arrested by FSB officers in October 2015 for supposedly laundering $46 billion through Moldovan and Baltic financial institutions<sup>11</sup>. Until 2014, among the members of the supervisory board of RZB was Igor Putin, the cousin of the Russian president<sup>12</sup>. Igor Putin had been also a board member of Promsberbank, another Russian bank controlled by Grigoriev. According to a whistleblower report, Promsberbank was involved in the Danske Bank financial scandal<sup>13</sup>.

2. Nearly $70 billion was laundered in Moldova between 2010-2014

The statistical reports show an increased amount of cash inflows originating from CIS (former Soviet) countries into the Moldovan banks between 2010 and 2014. The total inflows amounted to as much as $80 billion (94.4% originated from Russia<sup>14</sup>) and significantly exceeded financial flows from real economic activities, such as exports and personal remittances, which totaled $ 9 billion during the same period. A comparative analysis of these indicators is presented in the chart below:

Foreign direct investment ("FDI") and external loans were not considered, given their significantly lower value. For instance, during the 2010-2014 period the amount of FDI increased by $730 million up to a total of $3.6 billion, out of which only 11.2% was attributable to CIS countries.

Thus, during 2010-2014 the total inflows from CIS countries to Moldova related to suspicious activities are estimated at $71 billion, which is more than 10 times the annual GDP of Moldova for 2014. Following that, after the end of the Russian Laundromat scheme in 2014, annual financial inflows from CIS countries decreased significantly in 2015, from $21 billion to $3.2 billion. In order to clarify the situation, we submitted an information request to the Moldovan authorities<sup>16</sup>. In the answer provided by NBM, the supervisory authority explains that the suspicious transactions refer to interbank operations with deposits, loans and transactions with financial derivatives<sup>17</sup>. On the other hand, the OPFML considers the respective suspicious transactions as being part of the Russian Laundromat scheme conducted through Moldindconbank<sup>18</sup>. The OPFML fined the bank 4.3 million MDL (equivalent to approximately $250,000) for not submitting Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs). It is worth noting that the New York State financial regulator DFS is conducting an investigation into global money laundering and recently asked two Nordic banks (Nordea Bank Abp and SEB AB) to provide detailed information about their transactions with Moldindconbank<sup>19</sup>.

3. The role of the supervisory authorities in Moldova

When a court examines a debt repayment claim based on a promissory note worth $700 million (about 10% of Moldova's GDP in 2014) that was endorsed by a Moldovan citizen, it should obviously raise red flags. But when such cases happen continuously during a 5 year period, it is impossible to consider them as being a coincidence. It can only be seen as an organized process of legalizing ill-gotten funds originating from Russia.

3.1. National Bank of Moldova

The supervisory activity of the Moldovan banking sector is conducted by the NBM. According to Moldovan law, the NBM has the following AML instruments<sup>20</sup>:

- To block suspicious transactions related to operations without economic reasons and transfer of funds to offshore firms;
- To impose special administration on a poorly governed bank;
- To refuse to approve the appointment of a bank's top managers, if nominated by suspicious shareholders;

<sup>20</sup> Art. 75 of the Law of the NBM no. 548-XIII from 21.07.1995, available at <http://bnm.md/ro/content/lege-cu-privire-la-banca-nationala-moldovei-nr-548-xiii-din-21071995>

- To block the ownership stakes of suspicious shareholders which were acquired in a concerted action;
- To revoke the license of a bank.

Given the immense value of the suspicious transactions, the NBM should have performed an ad-hoc inspection of Moldindconbank to verify the legal grounds for the suspicious transfers. Nevertheless, the bank could not have refused to execute a payment ordered by a court ruling.

3.2. OPFML – the AML supervisory authority

The country's AML supervisory authority is the OPFML. According to the legal provisions, the banks are obliged to submit SARs to the OPFML about suspicious transactions within 24 hours after receiving the payment documents. The banks are obliged as well to indicate in the SAR the date and time of the transaction, the name and the title of the person who performed the transaction, as well as the reasons for suspicion<sup>21</sup>. The former governor of the NBM, Dorin Dragutanu, stated that during 2010-2014 Moldindconbank reported all such transactions to the OPFML<sup>22</sup>. Thus, the AML supervisory authority may have been aware of the ongoing money laundering activities from the very beginning. For its part, the OPFML has authority to block any suspicious transactions<sup>23</sup> and could notify the Prosecutor's Office about any reasonable suspicions of money laundering<sup>24</sup>.

3.3. Supreme Council of Magistracy

The national supervisory authority of the judiciary is the Supreme Council of Magistracy (SCM). At the request of the SCM, the Judiciary Inspection investigates the suspicious activity of the judges liable for criminal prosecution<sup>25</sup>. Accordingly, the Prosecutor General must request the permission of the SCM to initiate criminal proceedings against judges<sup>26</sup>. Although the Laundromat started in 2010, the Judiciary Inspection submitted its report on the suspicious court rulings to the SCM only in April 2014<sup>27</sup>. However, the prosecution of the complicit judges started much later. The Prosecutor General submitted the prosecution inquiry to the SCM in September 2016, i.e. more than two years after the scheme was over<sup>28</sup>.

3.4. Moldovan authorities failed to act

The Laundromat scheme was constructed very ingeniously, because all the parties involved in the debt repayment claims were not contesting them. However, when a Moldovan citizen guarantees a debt worth hundreds of millions of dollars, that fact should have raised concerns about the reasons for such economic activity. Given the fact that the money laundering process was based on court rulings, the issue was under the responsibility of the General Prosecutor's Office and the SCM. The Prosecutor General had to submit a prosecution inquiry to the SCM regarding the judges who issued the court rulings. Respectively, the SCM's Judiciary Inspection had to perform the investigation of the judges and collect evidence regarding the court rulings issued as part of the Laundromat scheme. It should also be noted that during 2011-2012 the instrument of court rulings based on fake debts was used in "raider attacks" (hostile takeovers using illegal tactics) against the shareholders of Moldova-Agroindbank, Victoriabank, as well as other Moldovan banks and insurance companies<sup>29</sup>.

The first investigative articles about the court rulings on suspicious debt recovery appeared as early as February 2012<sup>30</sup>. Shortly after that, the Chief Anticorruption Prosecutor Viorel Radetchi stated that a criminal investigation was started based on an order of the Prosecutor General<sup>31</sup>.

The first publicly available document issued by a Moldovan authority regarding the suspicious financial flows dates from July 2012, when a meeting of the SCS (Supreme Council of Security) took place. The minutes of the meeting were declassified in September 2015 by former President Nicolae Timofti<sup>32</sup>. The meeting gathered all the supervisory and enforcement institutions, including the NBM governor, the Prosecutor General, the head of the National Anticorruption Center (NAC) and the deputy head of the Security and Intelligence Service. The SCS recommended the Prosecutor's Office and the NAC to promptly investigate the information provided by the NBM about the suspicious activity of money laundering<sup>33</sup>. Following that, in December 2012 the SCM issued a decision related to one suspicious court ruling concerning a $30 million debt<sup>34</sup>, after the relevant information was provided by the Security and Intelligence Service to the Judiciary Inspection. The SCM noted that the judge issued the court ruling with multiple violations, including unauthenticated copies of the documents submitted to the court. The SCM notified the General Prosecutor's Office about this matter; however, no prosecution inquiry was submitted to the SCM.

Starting in at least February 2012, the prosecutors were aware of suspicious court rulings aimed at legalizing multi-million-dollar fake debts. By July 2012, all of the responsible state institutions were informed about the suspicious financial flows and recommended the Prosecutor's Office to investigate the issue. Nevertheless, the SCM conducted a thorough examination of the court rulings only in May 2014 and mentioned about a criminal prosecution that was opened on this matter<sup>35</sup>. This happened only after the release of the first investigative article describing the proportions of the Russian Laundromat scheme<sup>36</sup>. Even after that, no measures were taken regarding the judges and judicial executors involved in money laundering. As mentioned above in point 3.3, the prosecution inquiry concerning the complicit judges was submitted to the SCM just over 2 years later. The prosecutors sent the cases to the court in February 2017<sup>37</sup>. However, their examination has been postponed for more than 2 years<sup>38</sup>. For example, there have been cases of claims being examined by a district court, by the Court of Appeal, and by the Supreme Court in less than 3 weeks, when those cases involve the interest of the Democratic Party's leader Vladimir Plahotniuc, a Moldovan oligarch and controversial political figure. When protests were organized outside his apartment on Bulgara 41 Street in Chisinau during the summer of 2015, a related claim was submitted to the district court on July 27, and the case went shortly up to the Supreme Court, which issued a decision already on August 12, 2015<sup>39</sup>.

4. The role of the Moldovan political elites

All available evidence demonstrates that all the responsible state institutions were aware of the laundering scheme but did not take any measures to prevent it. Neither of the responsible persons addressed the press in order to raise the concern of the public and stop the fraud. Moreover, the authorities pretend that only $20 billion was laundered, hiding the fact that the real amount of the fraud is $70 billion, as the evidence shows. The overdue first reactions of public authorities came only in 2014, after the first information about the Laundromat scheme started to leak into the press. During 2010-2014, neither of the responsible state institutions mentioned anything in their annual reports about the suspicious money flows originating from Russia. A short notice about the staggering money laundering scheme appears only in the 2014 annual report of the OPFML<sup>40</sup>. This well-coordinated activity could not have taken place without the political protection of the ruling parties.

4.1. The political influence over the supervisory and prosecution authorities

The so-called “pro-European coalition” that governed the country between 2010 and 2014 had signed a coalition agreement in December 2010<sup>41</sup>. According to a secret annex to the agreement, the members of the coalition shared control over the supervisory and prosecution institutions that are supposed to be independent. Thus, the Democratic Party (DPM) controlled by Vladimir Plahotniuc obtained the control over the National Anticorruption Center and the General Prosecutor’s Office<sup>42</sup>. Other evidence shows that the NBM was also under the control of the Democratic Party. Dorin Dragutanu, the former governor of the NBM, has held several leading positions within the audit company PwC Moldova, including the position of country-manager for Moldova during 2003-2005. One of his subordinates was Andrian Candu, the Democratic Party MP and the former Speaker of the Parliament. Candu is also the wedding godson of Vladimir Plahotniuc. Before his resignation in September 2015, on the eve of the arrival of an IMF mission to Moldova, Dragutanu had a secret meeting with Candu<sup>43</sup>. Furthermore, Otilia Dragutanu, the wife of the former NBM governor, has recently become an MP of the Democratic Party following the 2019 parliamentary elections<sup>44</sup>.

4.2. Legislative changes that facilitated the money laundering

Sharing political influence over the supervisory bodies was not the only action taken by Moldovan political elites to protect the Laundromat scheme. During 2010-2011 the Parliament and the Constitutional Court approved several acts to change the legal framework, in order to facilitate money laundering schemes.

4.2.1. Legislative changes approved by the Parliament

In March 2010 a bill was submitted to Parliament on the cancellation of the 3% tax for the examination of debt recovery claims<sup>45</sup>. The bill was approved in May 2010<sup>46</sup>. This amendment was not a coincidence. According to AML experts, the organizers of money-laundering operations charge a 3-4% commission for the legalization and transfer of "dirty money"<sup>47</sup>. The author of the bill was the former MP and Minister of Justice Alexandru Tanase.

In June 2010 the Democratic Party MP Valeriu Guma submitted a bill to modify the AML (anti-money laundering) Law. The respective bill provided the courts the possibility to suspend the decisions of the OPFML to block the suspicious transactions<sup>48</sup>. The bill was approved by the Parliament in April 2011. Later, in July 2014 this provision was cancelled by another amendment. The informative note to the 2014 amendment mentions that the modifications approved by the Parliament in 2011 allowed for the execution of large scale money laundering operations, with the involvement of Russian economic agents and offshore firms.<sup>49</sup>

4.2.2. Legislative changes approved by the Constitutional Court

In June 2010 a referral was submitted to the Constitutional Court by the MP Valentin Chepteni, Veaceslav Platon's colleague within the Parliamentary faction of the AMN Party. The referral concerned the cancelation of several provisions of the Law on the National Anticorruption Center<sup>50</sup>. The Constitutional Court approved the referral in November 2010 and annulled the right of the OPFML to suspend suspicious financial operations<sup>51</sup>, although the judges Victor Puscas and Elena Safaleru gave a separate opinion on the Court's decision.

The Constitutional Court had its own role in approving legislative changes that facilitated the billion dollar theft. Thus, in June 2013 Serghei Sirbu, another MP of the Democratic Party, submitted a referral to the Constitutional Court and requested the cancellation of several provisions of the Law on the NBM and the Law on Administrative Litigation.<sup>52</sup> The Court headed

Ref: cash inflows CIS

Dear Sirs,

According to the statistical yearbook of the National Bank concerning the „International accounts of the Republic of Moldova”, the aggregated international financial flows from the CIS countries via the national banking system of Moldova exceed significantly the ordinary economic activities with the respective region, such as export, personal remittances from CIS countries, foreign direct investments and loans. The comparative analysis of these indicators for the period 2010-2015 is presented in the table below:

Table 1: Comparative analysis of the financial flows and economic activities with CIS countries, million USD

Indicator	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015
Gross financial inflows from CIS countries via the national banking system<sup>1</sup>	6 485,9	7 954,5	13 655,3	32 050,7	21 030,4	3 217,1
Gross financial inflows from ordinary economic activities, including:	1457,6	2 014,1	2 190,3	2 318,6	2 002,5	1 218,2
Export to CIS countries *	624,0	919,3	928,1	923,2	735,7	492,3
Personal remittances from CIS	833,6	1 094,8	1 262,2	1 395,4	1 266,8	725,9
Difference: financial inflows from unclear (suspicious) activities	5 028,3	5 940,5	11 465,1	29 732,1	19 027,9	1 998,9

\ The export to CIS countries differs from the financial flows generated by this activity (the commercial relations involve payment delays and existence of arrears), however given the lack of statistical data on this matter we will use the amount of export as the reference value.*

\* The amount of remittances in 2010 was 1244,14 million USD, out of which approx. 67% represent the remittances from CIS countries.*

Link: http://www.bnm.md/files/Anuar\_2016\_rom.pdf

We note that in every year exists a significant difference between the financial inflows transferred from CIS countries to the Republic of Moldova and the ordinary economic activities with CIS region. The amount of foreign direct investments and loans from CIS can be neglected, as they are considerably lower than the foreign trade and personal remittances.

Therefore, during 2010-2014 the gross financial inflows from uncertain (suspicious) activities is estimated at 71 billion USD. Given the fact that these financial flows were transferred from CIS via the banking system of the Republic of Moldova without any reasonable economic ground, these transactions can be treated as suspicious.

In this context we solicit the following information:

1. In which way the respective transactions were analyzed under the law on preventing and combatting the money laundering and terrorism financing?
2. For what reason in 2015 the annual financial inflows from CIS countries decreased significantly, from 21,0 billion USD to 3,2 billion USD?
3. What is the gross value of the tracked suspicious transactions and what countries they are originated from?
4. What sanctions were applied by the National Bank to the financial institutions and their executives concerning the performed suspicious transactions?
5. What is the amount of financial inflows transferred from the Russian Federation and Azerbaijan via the Moldovan banking system between 2010-2014 years?

Stimați domni,

Cu referire la întrebările dumneavoastră, Banca Națională a Moldovei (BNM) vă comunică următoarele informații de care dispune:

1. În ce mod au fost analizate tranzacțiile respective prin prisma Legii privind prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului?

În perioada la care se face referință (2010-2015), BNM a dispus în domeniul prevenirii și combaterii spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului de competența expres prevăzută în art. 10 din Legea nr. 190 din 26.07.2007 privind prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului. În particular, competența BNM în domeniul prevenirii și combaterii spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului, în fond, a constat în emiterea actelor normative, ghidurilor și recomandărilor pentru implementarea legii menționate, precum și în verificarea aplicării de către entitățile raportoare supravegheate a prevederilor legii și ale actelor normative respective, ale programelor proprii în domeniul respectiv.

Totodată, în temeiul legii menționate, obligațiile privind aplicarea unor măsuri specifice – identificarea, verificarea identității clienților, beneficiarului efectiv, adoptarea unor măsuri rezonabile pentru a înțelege structura proprietății și structura de control ale clientului, scopul și natura relației de afaceri, monitorizarea continuă a relației de afaceri, inclusiv examinarea tranzacțiilor, obținerea și evaluarea informației, raportarea către organul abilitat a informației cu privire la tranzacțiile suspecte, păstrarea datelor – au revenit băncilor și altor persoane juridice și fizice care, potrivit legii, erau „entități raportoare”.

În acest context, BNM vă informează că examinarea, analizarea prin prisma legii menționate a fiecărei tranzacții în parte efectuate prin intermediul entităților raportoare, calificarea tranzacțiilor ca fiind suspecte, raportarea tranzacțiilor suspecte și a unor altor tranzacții, conform legii, nu țin de atribuțiile BNM. Examinarea și analiza de către BNM a unor tranzacții/operațiuni concrete efectuate prin intermediul sau de către entitățile raportoare poate avea loc cu ocazia efectuării unui control (complex sau tematic) la entitatea respectivă și doar în contextul verificării respectării de către entitate a prevederilor actelor normative respective, ale programelor proprii referitor la aplicarea măsurilor sus-menționate (identificarea clienților, verificarea identității lor, a beneficiarului efectiv, a scopului și naturii relației de afaceri, monitorizarea continuă a relației de afaceri, obținerea și evaluarea informației). Notăm că BNM examinează tranzacțiile pe un anumit eșantion selectat în conformitate inclusiv cu practicile internaționale în domeniu și procedurile interne, și nu toate tranzacțiile efectuate prin entitatea respectivă într-o anumită perioadă.

Sub aspectul exercitării atribuției BNM de supraveghere, unele activități sau tranzacții în bănci au fost verificate în cadrul controalelor efectuate de BNM. Informația mai amplă în acest sens este prezentată în continuare la pct. 3, 4.

Totodată, menționăm că datele privind fluxul de mijloace financiare în/din Republica Moldova referitoare la conturile internaționale ale Republicii Moldova se colectează și se procesează de către BNM în scopuri statistice, pentru exercitarea atribuțiilor BNM de întocmire a balanței de plăți și elaborare a statisticii cu privire la datoria externă a Republicii Moldova. Aceste fluxuri includ și transferurile de capital precum rulajele interbancare și, de regulă, sunt mai mari decât valoarea schimburilor comerciale și a remiterilor.

Datele menționate se publică în anuarul statistic al BNM și sunt elaborate cu respectarea Legii cu privire la statistica oficială, care stabilește scopul și regimul de utilizare a datelor statistice.

2. Din care motiv în anul 2015 se înregistrează o scădere considerabilă a transferurilor din CSI, de la 21,0 miliarde USD până la 3,2 miliarde USD?

În anul 2015, comparativ cu anul 2014, în sistemul bancar s-a înregistrat o scădere a fluxurilor financiare totale din țările CSI. Această scădere s-a produs pe fondul reducerii (cu peste 80 la sută) valorii tranzacțiilor financiare interbancare, operate de băncile licențiate în nume propriu (operațiuni de convertire, depozite interbancare inclusiv overnight, împrumuturi interbancare, derivate financiare, ș.a.), inclusiv ca urmare a măsurilor de supraveghere aplicate de BNM băncilor cărora ulterior le-au fost retrase licențele de desfășurare a activităților financiare.

3, 4. Care este valoarea totală a tranzacțiilor suspecte depistate și din care țări provin aceste tranzacții? Ce sancțiuni au fost aplicate de către Banca Națională asupra instituțiilor financiare și administratorilor acestora în legătură cu efectuarea tranzacțiilor suspecte respective?

În scopul prevenirii și combaterii spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului, în conformitate cu art.8 din Legea nr.190 din 26.07.2007, entitățile raportoare sunt obligate să informeze Serviciul Prevenirea și Combaterea Spălării Banilor despre orice activitate sau despre orice tranzacție suspectă de spălare a banilor și de finanțare a terorismului, aceste date fiind remise în adresa SPCSB.

Suplimentar celor expuse în răspunsul la prima întrebare, vă informăm că în perioada 2010-2015, BNM a efectuat controale pe teren și din oficiu la bănci, inclusiv în scopul verificării respectării legislației privind prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor, ca parte componentă a legislației care constituie obiectul supravegherii.

Ca rezultat, în perioada respectivă, urmare încălcării legislației depistate în activitatea unor bănci, BNM a aplicat, în limita competenței sale, 37 de avertismente scrise, 18 amenzi, 4 retrageri de licență. Încălcările au vizat și fapte de nerespectare a prevederilor legislației privind prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului (neaplicarea măsurilor suficiente de identificare și verificare a clienților, beneficiarilor efectivi ai tranzacțiilor sau fondurilor, lipsa informației necesare privind scopul și natura relației de afaceri, neraportarea unor tranzacții ce conțin indicii tranzacției suspecte etc). Urmare neregulilor depistate, BNM a informat organele de drept competente în legătură cu identificarea faptelor de încălcare a legislației sau a activităților/tranzacțiilor suspecte de spălare a banilor.

Informația și datele privind rezultatele măsurilor întreprinse de BNM în domeniul prevenirii și combaterii spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului sunt dezvăluite și în rapoartele de specialitate ale autorităților naționale și organizațiilor internaționale (rapoartele anuale ale SPCSB, al 4-lea raport de evaluare „Moneyval” din 2012, Raportul de evaluare a stabilității sistemului financiar efectuat de Banca Mondială și Fondul Monetar Internațional) cu competențe în domeniul prevenirii și combaterii spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului.<sup>1</sup>

5. Care este volumul transferurilor efectuate din Federația Rusă și Azerbaidjan în Republica Moldova prin intermediul sistemului bancar în perioada 2010-2014?

BNM nu elaborează statistici pe țări ale tranzacțiilor bancare cu nerezidenții. Statistica operațiunilor bancare internaționale este una din sursele primare, care se colectează și se utilizează doar în scopul producerii statisticilor oficiale privind „Conturile internaționale ale Republicii Moldova”, inclusiv „Balanța de plăți a statului” și indicatorul „Transferurile de mijloace bănești din străinătate efectuate în favoarea persoanelor fizice prin intermediul băncilor”. O analiză succintă dedicată acestei surse importante este publicată trimestrial în cadrul „Comentariilor analitice la Conturile Internaționale ale Republicii Moldova” ([http://bnm.md/ro/search?partitions\[0\]=677&post\_types\[677\]\[0\]=2237](http://bnm.md/ro/search?partitions[0]=677&post_types[677][0]=2237)) în spiritul transparenței și alinierii Codului de Bune Practici al Statisticilor Europene.

Totodată, în vederea oferirii unui răspuns detaliat la întrebarea dvs., au fost efectuate prelucrări suplimentare ale datelor statistice, prezentate în tabelul ce urmează:

Tabel. Volumul încasărilor totale de fluxuri financiare din Federația Rusă și Azerbaidjan în Republica Moldova, înregistrate prin sistemul bancar al Republicii Moldova în perioada 2010 – 2014 (mil. USD).

În ultimii trei ani, Banca Națională a Moldovei a pornit un proces amplu de reforme soldate cu un cadru normativ nou, bazat pe principiile Basel III, un nou cadru de combatere a spălării banilor, o supraveghere mult mai riguroasă a băncilor, a luat măsuri pentru transparentizarea acționariatului bancar și sporirea responsabilității personale a bancherilor etc. De asemenea, schimbarea calitativă a acționarilor unui șir de bănci exclude posibilitatea derulării schemelor de acest gen prin intermediul băncilor licențiate.

Agenda de reforme va continua în sistemul bancar, cu scopul de a asigura dezvoltarea acestuia, a implementa mecanisme noi de prevenire a crizelor și a pune în aplicare cele mai bune practici internaționale pentru prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului.

Serviciul a examinat solicitarea din 16 ianuarie 2019 cu privire la datele aferente intrărilor de fluxuri financiare din CSI în sistemul bancar național pentru perioada anilor 2010 – 2015 și în limitele competențelor deținute comunică că în conformitate cu prevederile Legii nr. 308 din 22.12.2017 „cu privire la prevenirea și combaterea spălării banilor și finanțării terorismului”, Serviciul primește, înregistrează, analizează, prelucrează și transmite organelor competente informațiile privind activitățile și tranzacțiile suspecte de spălare a banilor, de infracțiuni asociate acestora și de finanțare a terorismului, prezentate de entitățile raportoare.

Astfel, din informațiile acumulate conform competențelor legale deținute, s-a concluzionat că pînă în anul 2014 o parte din fluxul financiar al mijloacelor bănești provenite din Federația Rusă a avut un caracter tranzitoriu, în acest context din informațiile preliminare deținute, diferența dintre valoarea fluxurilor financiare provenite din Federația Rusă pentru perioada anilor 2010 – 2014 în comparație cu perioada ulterioară este motivată de tranzitarea mijloacelor bănești prin schema de spălare de bani „Laundromat”.
